

I have just read the alarming article in the Canberra Times about rangers/contractors bludgeoning joeys to death as part of the kangaroo cull.

The science around the kangaroo cull seems to be woolly at best, but the bludgeoning of healthy joeys is most certainly an unnecessary act of cruelty. If anyone else were to bludgeon an animal for no reason, they would be charged with animal cruelty.

Stop the barbaric cull, leave the mothers and joeys in peace. I believe we have co-existed with the kangaroo population here for over 100 years. Let's continue to co-exist with what many regard as a national treasure.
