Answered: 10 Skipped: 1

Q2 Criterion A: Importance to the course or pattern of the ACT's cultural or natural history. The Council has assessed The Civic Square Precinct against criterion (a) and is satisfied that the place is likely to meet this criterion. The Civic Square Precinct is important to the course and pattern of the ACT's cultural history as a site for the civic administration of the city, a centre of cultural facilities, as a 'town square' that provides a forum for public events, performances, artwork, protest and celebration and also for the design and its implementation by the National Capital Development Authority (NCDA) (later the National Capital Development Commission (NCDC)) and the square's planning that reinforces the spatial characteristics of Griffin's plan as the city evolved. The Civic Square Precinct includes a significant suite of infrastructure and buildings that form the Square, and public open space. The buildings have housed government administration since it opened in 1960, initially for the Commonwealth Department of the Interior, the ACT Advisory Council, and since self-government, the ACT Legislative Assembly. The Square itself is an important space for holding public events and activities, including celebrations, protests and performances. The space continues to host various forms of temporary public art exhibitions. 'Ethos', designed by Tom Bass (1961), is a permanent sculpture prominently located within the square, representing the 'spirit of the community' and reflecting the philosophy of the space. The civic role of the place in hosting cultural events and promoting culture in the ACT extends further, with the Cultural Facilities Corporation (initially, the Canberra Theatre Trust) managing the Canberra Theatre Centre, the Canberra Museum and Gallery (CMAG) and the Nolan Gallery. Additionally, the North Building houses various community-based cultural organisations. Very little activity had occurred in the City Hill area, until the middle of the century, when the Courts Precinct and The Civic Square Precinct were constructed under the NCDC. The NCDC commissioned the development of the Precinct, which was designed by Roy McGowan Simpson, AO, of Yuncken Freeman, with the purpose of reinforcing the spatial characteristics of Griffin's plan for Canberra for the concentration of civic and municipal administration around City Hill, with land axis links to the Capitol (now Parliament House) and a retail area (now the Russell Offices/Defence administration area). The functions of The Civic Square Precinct fitted in with Griffin's plan to situate the local administration in that area with the Civic Offices (now the North and South Buildings) housing the local administration branch of the Department of the Interior as well as the public library and being the location for the city square. It also reinforced Griffin's overall planning for Canberra by maintaining his main axial lines. As part of The Civic Square Precinct, the original Canberra Theatre Centre was designed by Yuncken Freeman in 1961 and includes an innovative early use of continuous copper roof decking. Q3 Criterion B:Has uncommon, rare or endangered aspects of the ACT's cultural or natural history.The Council has assessed The Civic Square Precinct against criterion (b) and is satisfied the place is likely to meet this criterion.The Civic Square Precinct is planned for civic uses and includes a public square with a focus on municipal and cultural use. The success of NCDC's planning for the location of a civic square was dependant on developing the rest of City Hill as the civic and municipal centre that Griffin envisaged. The Civic Square Precinct is the only dedicated civic, open space in the ACT, designed to be in a central location for civic administration, community and cultural events, public celebrations and demonstrations. The Canberra Theatre Centre frames the western side of the Square and provides a complementary function to the civic space. In Australia, it was one of the first such centres built, and the first major government-funded theatre. It was built in response to the needs of a growing community, and its opening in 1965 marked a major step forward in the cultural life of Canberra.Your Comments on criterion (B) below:

Q4 Criterion C: Potential to yield important information that will contribute to an understanding of the ACT's cultural or natural history. The Council has assessed The Civic Square Precinct against criterion (c) and is satisfied that the place is not likely to meet this criterion. The Civic Square Precinct does not have the potential to yield important information that will contribute to further understanding of the ACT's cultural history. There is sufficient information available about the function, uses, design, planning and historic development of The Civic Square Precinct, therefore it is unlikely to yield additional information that would give a greater understanding of the cultural history of the ACT. Your Comments on criterion (C) below:

Answered: 6 Skipped: 5

Q5 Criterion D: Importance in demonstrating the principal characteristics of a class of cultural or natural places or objects. The Council has assessed

The Civic Square Precinct against criterion (d) and is satisfied that the place is likely to meet this criterion. The Civic Square Precinct is important for demonstrating the principal characteristics of a civic space. The Civic Square Precinct is used for cultural activities including concerts, markets, festivals, displays, celebrations and planned community events, as well as for public activism through demonstrations and protests. It has a variety of amenities, when taken as a whole incorporating Ainslie Place, including the Civic Library, the Canberra Museum and Gallery (CMAG), the Canberra Theatre Centre, the fountain (pool), specifically designed sculptures for the civic space, the City Hill-Mount Ainslie axis/vista, places to sit in the shade and various cafes along the edges. It is generally seen as being clean and safe. Roy Simpson, of Yuncken Freeman and primary architect of the Square, in his AS Hook address (an address given by recipients of the Australian Institute of Architects Gold Medal) noted that the overall precinct design is more important than the individual elements within it. There was a hierarchy of importance, with the buildings subservient to the precinct and the precinct subservient to the city. Simpson's design philosophy is evident in The Civic Square Precinct, where it has been planned around Griffin's City Hill group and axial lines while the buildings themselves are fairly subdued, creating the open square as the focus. The changes to the Precinct have reinforced the Precinct's role and subservience to the City even further by giving priority to movement and sightlines along Griffin's axis. This highlights the collective importance of the elements— the architecture, the spatial qualities and relationships and the overall aesthetic of the precinct to deliver the qualities which were envisaged by Simpson when he designed it. Q6 Criterion E: Importance in exhibiting particular aesthetic characteristics valued by the ACT community or a cultural group in the ACT. The Council has assessed The Civic Square Precinct against criterion (e) and is satisfied that the place is not likely to meet this criterion. That the aesthetic characteristics are valued by the ACT community or cultural groups in the ACT has not been tested, although this may emerge more clearly in the future. The Square's design emphasises the overall precinct within the greater city plan and frames the views and axial lines between City Hill and Mount Ainslie. The Civic Square Precinct has aesthetic characteristics as a designed space for public, cultural and ceremonial activities of about 60 x 60 metres. The design demonstrates classical civic design principles within a 'post modern' aesthetic. The classical layout for civic spaces involves the arrangement of significant buildings on elevated platforms or podiums. The North and South Buildings, both administrative and community buildings, create the 'square', and the sequencing of the podiums that culminate in the Canberra Theatre Centre. The Civic Square Precinct also has an ascending sequence of spaces, with the highest terminating point at City Hill, the elevated podium of the Canberra Theatre Centre at the western side, with its grand staircase, providing prominence to the theatre, a place of cultural activities for the community and the City. Originally the pool, a large rectangular element of 945m², was an integral part of the design and had an aesthetic function, providing the central focus of the square, with several fountain jets surrounded by spillage drains and a bed of uneven, polished river rocks set in concrete. The simplicity and purity of the square's design is complemented by its public art, with 'Ethos', an iconic sculpture for Canberra, symbolising the spirit of the community and celebrated since its installation in 1961. The Square is the setting of major site-specific artworks and many activities that respond to the place, its form and function. Your Comments on criterion (E) below:

Answered: 6 Skipped: 5

Q7 Criterion F: importance in demonstrating a high degree of creative or technical achievement for a particular period. The Council has assessed The Civic Square Precinct against criterion (f) and is satisfied that the place is not likely to meet this criterion. The design of the Square was in line with international urban design standards and influenced by post-war contemporary town squares. There are creative and technical achievements including the gold gilt mosaic tiles and the previous incorporation of the cooling system within the original pond designed by Tom Bass. However, The Civic Square Precinct does not demonstrate the high degree of creative or technical achievement or meet the threshold for this criterion. Your Comments on criterion (F) below:

Q8 Criteria G:Has a strong or special association with the ACT community, or a cultural group in the ACT for social, cultural or spiritual reasons.The Council has assessed The Civic Square Precinct against criterion (g) and is satisfied that the place is likely to meet this criterion.The Civic Square Precinct has a special association with the ACT community for social and cultural reasons. The place has an enduring special association with the ACT Community. It is an important location for celebration of sporting and other local achievements, protests, cultural events and significant social gatherings like New Year, NAIDOC Week and the Multicultural Festival.As a designed public square that incorporates the local administration, it is a place frequently used by Canberrans to voice their concerns publicly in protest. The Cultural Facilities Corporation puts on live shows and productions at the place for the benefit of the culture of the ACT.Your Comments on criterion (G) below:

Answered: 7 Skipped: 4

Q9 Criterion H:Has a special association with the life or work of a person, or people, important to the history of the ACT.The Council has assessed The Civic Square Precinct against criterion (h) and is satisfied that the place is likely to meet this criterion.Roy Simpson was an accomplished architect and planner with a design philosophy of being sensitive to context rather than creating more noticeable and grandiose buildings. His contribution to the history of the ACT is evidenced by his design of The Civic Square Precinct, the Law Courts Precinct, various projects within the ANU as well as guiding its overall design for 12 years, Canberra Grammar School's science wing, 18 houses for the Chief of Defence Service (the first NCDC commission), planning the Cotter Reserve as well as overseeing aspects of renovations to the Lodge and the Governor General's Residence at Yarralumla. Simpson used The Civic Square Precinct as one of the three examples, along with the Melbourne Diocesan Centre and the La Trobe University master plan that exemplified his work and design philosophy in his A S Hook memorial address. He wrote the address in response to winning the RAIA Gold Medal but it was delivered posthumously by his wife Donne Simpson.The Civic Square Precinct, including the North and South Buildings and the Canberra Theatre Centre, has maintained a strong and special association with local level administration of the ACT from the initial use by the Department of the Interior, to its current use as site for the Legislative Assembly. This association is considered to be special as there is a continuing history of the square beside these offices as a place of protest that is publicly visible and directly associated with the administration since 1988. The association is also considered to be special as the ACT administration, particularly prior to self-government when the Commonwealth could have located the department anywhere, is located at the municipal zone in Griffin's plan.The Civic Square Precinct is associated with the Canberra Theatre Trust (set up under the Canberra Theatre Trust Ordinance 1965, which established they would use the Canberra Theatre Centre and make it available while promoting and encouraging the development and presentation of the arts in Canberra). The Trust became the Cultural Facilities Corporation (set up under the Cultural Facilities Corporation Act 1997). The Corporation was expanded to include Canberra Historic Houses as well as CMAG and the Nolan Collection, while promoting cultural activities and collections. Their work has established the Canberra Theatre Centre as Australia's first major theatre to be built with government funds, providing a world-class venue that continues to attract all levels of productions from local to internationally renowned companies, individual performers and concerts. While the place has a connection with Walter Burley Griffin's plan by reinforcing the spatial characteristics of his axial lines it is on such a broad level that he has no direct or special association with The Civic Square Precinct specifically. This association of the place to Griffin has not met the threshold for this criterion. Your Comments on criterion (H) below:

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

A new park is planned for the Molonglo River Reserve. The space will be an important recreation, restoration and cultural ‘hub’ for the local community.

This report outlines the consultation process that the Environment, Planning and Sustainable Development Directorate (the Directorate) carried out regarding the Draft Nature Space Concept Plans, released in 2019.

INTRODUCTION

A new nature space is proposed for the Molonglo River Reserve. Roughly the size of Black Mountain Peninsula at 35 hectares, the nature space will be an important recreation and restoration ‘hub’ for the local community. The area has some of Canberra’s best river access and is home to a wide range of native plants and animals, including the threatened Pink-tailed Worm-lizard, Superb Parrot and Box-Gum Grassy Woodland habitat.

A community consultation period commenced on 19 June 2019 and concluded on 14 August 2019 <https://www.yoursay.act.gov.au/act-parks/molonglo-nature-space>

We invited community to have their say by:

- Reviewing the location and the draft concept plan
- Taking the online survey and nominating ‘top experiences’ for the reserve
- Sending comments to EPSDD on the draft designs (epsddcomms@act.gov.au)

TIMELINE OF ENGAGEMENT

The below infographic provides a summary of key project consultation milestones.

WHAT WE HEARD

SUMMARY OF KEY INSIGHTS FROM THE ENGAGEMENT

Over the nine week consultation period, the community were engaged in a number of different ways, including, an official launch by Minister Gentleman, social media (Facebook posts), print media (e.g. The Chronicle, Our Canberra), television (7 News and WIN News articles) and radio (2CC article). A presentation and face-to-face meetings were held with the public at the Suburban Land Agency Molonglo Mingle information evening (June 2019).

On Your Say, we ran a Quick Poll and provided opportunity for more detailed feedback, including comments and written submission options, which are summarised below.

DETAIL OF INSIGHTS FROM THE ENGAGEMENT

Key insights from consultation

Bushwalking and connections

1. There is strong support for establishing accessible and robust pedestrian and cycling connections through the reserve, including walking tracks through nature areas.
2. Support also exists for the preservation, enhancement and restoration of habitat for wildlife in the area.
3. Restricted dog-on-leash tracks and dog prohibited areas along the river margin was a primary consideration given the conservation values of the site.

Amenities

4. Access to shade, toilets, bubblers (drinking fountains) and seating was considered important for the reserve.
5. Additionally, access to free parking nearby was also considered important.

River access

6. There was strong support for safe access to the river for a variety of recreational activities.
7. The Parks and Conservation Service note that swimming in the Molonglo River is not permitted due to water quality concerns and flood risks, however opportunities for passive recreation such as picnics and fishing would be considered.

Nature playground

8. Having a designated 'wilderness area' for kids of all ages to explore, learn and enjoy nature, was one of the most popular themes.
9. Valuable opportunities were identified for the nature space, including running children's education events, Parkcare activities and ranger-guided tours.

NEXT STEPS

All submissions and survey responses have been considered in the detailed design planning for the Molonglo nature space. A copy of the final Plan is available on the Your Say website.

Construction work is now scheduled to commence in early July 2020.

3. Do you have any comments on the draft designs?

Long Text Skipped: 89 Answered: 48 (35%)

The designs need to consider the needs of aquatic species. The Australian Platypus Conservancy has specific guidelines for urban and riparian design features which must impact on platypus. Similarly there needs to be thought given to how to protect fish...

We really like the design and we are looking forward to visiting the park. It's great that Canberra is going to have a new park and we are very excited to have a place to celebrate the Ngannawa people! Thank you for letting us have a say.
